

PEN DENSHAM
BIOGRAPHY

Executive Producer of
UPN's "THE TWILIGHT ZONE"

Pen Densham is one of Hollywood's most prolific and successful creative talents – a hyphenate who has made his mark as the writer, producer and/or director responsible for many television and motion picture hits.

A founding partner of Trilogy Entertainment Group, Densham made his network television producing debut with the series "Space Rangers," which he created and executive produced for CBS. He also engineered the rebirth of the highly successful, multiple award-winning "The Outer Limits" television series, which recently completed its seventh season.

Densham, along with Trilogy partners John Watson and Mark Stern, has executive produced over 250 hours of television, including "The Outer Limits" and "The Magnificent Seven." Densham also wrote, directed and executive produced "Houdini," which starred Johnathon Schaech. This summer, Trilogy also bows its new series "Breaking News."

On the motion picture side, Trilogy produced "Robin Hood: Prince Of Thieves," which was co-written by Densham and Watson. Trilogy also produced the hit "Backdraft," starring Kurt Russell and Robert DeNiro, and "Moll Flanders," starring Robin Wright and Morgan Freeman, which Densham directed from his own screenplay. Along with his partners, Densham also produced "Blown Away," starring Jeff Bridges and Tommy Lee Jones, "Tank Girl" and "Larger Than Life." Most recently, he and Watson also served as executive producers on "The Dangerous Lives of Altar Boys," starring Jodie Foster.

Densham resides in Los Angeles.
